UNIVERSITY PRESENTATION	Ca' Foscari University of Venice was founded on August 6th 1868 as a Royal School of Commerce, by a group of brilliant intellectuals: Luigi Luzzatti, a law teacher and former minister; Edoardo Deodati, vice-president of the Province of Venice and Francesco Ferrara, the headteacher of the school for its first 32 years. The institute was the first business school in Italy: its main goal was both to train tradesmen and to prepare the future teachers of economics. Moreover, since the foundation, students were also required to study languages, both Western (French, English, German, Spanish, Serbo-Croat, modern Greek) and Eastern (Arabic, Turkish, Japanese). In 1935 Ca' Foscari became a governmental University institution and founded the Faculty of Economics and Business (later renamed the Faculty of Economics in 1994). In 1968, Ca' Foscari became a fully-fledged University with the founding of the first Faculty of Foreign Languages in Italy. In 1969 the Faculty of Humanities was founded and finally, in 1970, the Faculty of Chemistry was added, later renamed Faculty of Sciences. Today Ca' Foscari University has about 24.000 students and 4.000 graduates every year. It covers 4 scientific and cultural areas - Foreign Languages and Literatures, Humanities, Economics, Sciences – organized in 8 Departments. In 2012 Ca' Foscari created the International College, a school of excellence for the best students. It also holds high positions in the QS rankings regarding the Language, Linguistics and Ancient History fields.
